

About Ronny Shani

Ronny has been a journalist for over 8 years now, and has written for both print and online publication. She started her Career at ynet, Yedioth Ahronot's online edition, where she spent two years as assistant editor of the technology section.

She also spent a year and a half as managing editor for Nana10's tech section, and has since written for some of Israel's prominent Newspapers and magazines, including Globes, The 7th eye, and more. Over the years Ronny wrote at several of Yedioth Ahronot's magazines about technology, cellular, design, marketing, and culture. She currently serves as a senior writer with Calcalist. Her fields of expertise include technology, culture, media, and the way those worlds come together.

She has interviewed figures like Ray Kurzweil, Paulo Coelho, director Cecilia Miniucchi , Google's Shona Brown, designer Richard Seymour, designer Neville Brody, Mozilla's John Lili, artist Mieke Gerritzen, writer Ori Brafman, Sir Ken Robinson, Digg's Jay Edelson, Scott Karp, Dan Gillmor, Howard Rheingold, Yochai Benkler, Nova Spivack, and many more.

Ronny is 32 years old, lives in Tel Aviv, and maintains a Blog called iRonnysh.